

Subject: Re: Australian chapter

From: Peter GMP <gmpfilms@gmail.com>

Date: 8/12/2012 12:34 PM

To: Kari <karin.e.mcgregor@gmail.com>

I am no longer engaging the issue. The damage you have already done to the TVP/TZM relationship is already too severe and the personal insult to me directly by your decision not to pull the article, at least in the meantime, knowing very well I am the one who faces all consequences in the end and I am the one who has to try and bridge again, leads me to assume that both you and David really are clueless with respect to basic decency on multiple levels - now hiding behind a "collective" decision "protocol" in order to secure the arrogance and conceit that has already been put forward by your actions.

Email Gil or Miguel in the future as I am no longer personally interested. If you choose to keep the article, it will be up to them and the other Global Coords to decide if TZM is to recognize Australia anymore. Sorry if you all still don't "get it". This is really simple, basic consideration and respect stuff.

Peter

On Fri, Dec 7, 2012 at 6:13 PM, Kari <karin.e.mcgregor@gmail.com> wrote:

Hi there Peter,

In response to your request that the "Debunking TVP" article be immediately removed from the TZM Australia website we would like to politely request a little more time - 12 more hours from now will be enough for us.

The team had a meeting yesterday to discuss our response to the request and its consequent threat of de-officialization of the Australian chapter and have concluded that we were not given sufficient time to come up with a final response to the matter. The team have, however, decided to formulate an interim response, which will be our collective response at this stage based upon collating the responses of individual volunteers whose voices need to be heard. It will take me a bit longer to collate all responses as we have given the volunteers until 2pm today to contribute their input, and from then I will be able to provide the collective response which will determine our course of action. Now, myself and David have to be at an event in Brisbane today (TZM does not pause its actions for anything) and are unable to be online for the rest of the day - this is unfortunate timing and of course it wasn't taken into account in your request. Tonight, when we are back online, we will follow through with the course of action determined by the response of the team.

I hope that you do not see this as us stalling for time - it is simply that any decision is necessarily followed by a course of action, and we are already late to depart for this event (4-hour round-trip drive - as I'll be driving I can't be typing/teamspeaking - plus time spent at the event).

Thank you for your consideration - we will get back to you asap.

Regards,

--

Kari McGregor

Editor, Spirit of the Times magazine

www.thespiritofcommunity.org